

Reusable Life

An aspect of the space I'm interested in is light, this being artificial or natural and how it can transform the space from more than just a hallway. I want to use Donovan's idea method of stacking as well as her light explorations to inspire my work. Light can add to productivity and better mood creating a place where people can socialize and do work, as well as relax. I also want to explore the different interactions people would have with the space if there was a lack or excessive light. I placed warm toned receding lights along the ceiling to create a cozy place since my color palette is mostly whites light browns (excluding the existing brick from the building)
