

The One

My concept for this project was based on the question “if you had to keep only one picture forever what would it be?”. I presented each individual the same prompt and curated the 10 pictures below. As the experiment progressed I was interested in the ambiguity of keeping a physical photo versus a digital copy, as well as the array of things people deemed the only thing they would like see for the rest of their lives.

